Faith Community

Tips for building this asset

Faith-based organizations strongly emphasize their ideas of positive values. It's important for parents to choose carefully. When you find a faith community that supports your family's values, your kids are more likely to internalize these values and make responsible decisions. Visit various faith-based organizations, and include your children in decisions about how and where to be involved. If you're already part of a faith community, welcome new parents and young people into your organization.

Also try this

In your home and family: Include faith and spirituality into your family's daily life. Choose ways that best fit with your values, traditions, and culture.

In your neighborhood and community: Become an active member of a faith community and help promote the well-being of young people in your community.

In your school or youth program: Avoid scheduling events that conflict with families' spiritual or cultural commitments. Use a community calendar of events to help with your planning. If your community doesn't have such a calendar, consider creating one.
